The High School.

It is a pleasure to know that our people are considering the need of the high school to which the Press and Banner referred last week. It is certain that more school room must soon be provided, or else the doors of the school must be closed to a number of our children. There is no doubt in the mind of this éditor that a high school to which boys and girls could be sent would be of great value to the town and of incalculable to benefit to many of our young people.

At the close of this school year, quite a number of young folk will graduate. A large percent of mothers and fathers of these boys and girls would be hard pressed, if they sent their children off to college next fall. The cost of sending a boy or girl to a local school is very small when compared to the expense of sending a student to a college in a distant

If Abbeville had a good high school of still higher grade than our graded school, our own children would be benefitted, and students would come to it from a distance, and their presence would add to the business prosperity of the city.

As Abbeville must provide additional school room, then let us build a high school and raise the standard of education two or three grades. One IOC or two grades could be taken from the graded school and put in the new school. This would give room for the constantly increaing number in the lower grades.

By issuing bonds the cost would not be appreciable. Five per centbonds could be easily floated. The interest would be easily paid, without increasing the levy, and free educational priviledges would then be iven to the poorest as well as the richest boys and girls in the city.

The payment of the bonds could be deferred until such time as would enable our grandchildren to settle the debt. In twenty or thirty years from now the city will be much richer than it is today, and then when the town is rich it can easily enough pay the trifling sum which a school house would cost.

Or, possibly, if the credit plan doesn't suit our people the city coun cil could find some easier or better means of raising the money. Why couldn't the town borrow the sinking fund for the payment of our outstanding school bonds.

If somebody would take an active part in building the much needed school house it seems to us it could be built.

Another matter. The negroes of this city have received very little attention in the way of a school house. Let us build a good primary IOC school house for them, too.

Mayor McMillan, and his associate aldermen are about to build a monument to themselves and a testimonial to our public spirit in the proposed council chamber. Let them do a little more and build a school house in which all the young men and young women of the city may receive a more liberal education than they can now get.

FERTILIZING THE CROP.

The primary object in using fertilizer is to produce a larger yield of the crop that is to be immediately grown, or is already growing, on the land to which the fertilizer is to be applied. As a rule, it contains from ten to sixteen per cent. of more or less promptly available plant food. In other words, a commercial fertilizer contains in every hundred pounds weight from 10 to 16 pounds of available phosphoric acid, either alone, or that amount of phosphoric acid and potash combined, or of these two and nitrogen combined, making in the latter ase, what is called a "complete" fertilizer. Now, this 10 to 15 pounds if each 100 pounds of the fertilizer is supposed to be, and should be, practically soluble and available at once, or within a week or two, for the use of the crop, says Virginia-Carolina Fertilizer Almanac.

The remaining portion of the fertilizer, or the 34 to 30 pounds in each 100 pounds, is a mixture of insoluble phosphate and sulphate of lime, some sand, water, organic matter and other things that are necessarily incident to the manufacture, and cannot be economically removed.

or the st to sponding each no possible and is a mixture of insoluble phosphate and is a mixture of insoluble phosphate and cannot be concomically removed incessarily incident to the manufacture, and cannot be economically removed. They are of very little insoluble plant food and to either the cropy is high-grade fertilizer to the well the object is to supply the plant food and bedded on, there are circumstances are to the well the object is to supply the plant with soluble plant food and bedded on, there are circumstances are presented in the soil of the bedding furrow in the plant with soluble plant food and bedded on, there are circumstances are presented in the soil of the bedding furrow in the plant with soluble plant food and bedded on, there are circumstances are presented in the soil of the bedding furrow in that would justify a farmer in making the content of the plants or whatever the crop may be.

Incidentally, however, this fertilizer does the plants or those parts that will be returned to, and become part of the soil. A dose of this fertilizer, for instance, and only increases the yield of seed cotton, but also the size of the stalks, the follage, hulls and other parts that go immediately back and form a part of the soil in the shape of humus (decayed vegetable matter). But the principal way to the soil in the shape of humus (decayed vegetable matter). But the principal way to the soil in the shape of humus (decayed vegetable matter). But the principal way to the soil that the purpose is to improve the soil itself, is to add vegetable matters, but in the form of stable manure, renovating crops, rotation of crops, etc. in a more direct namer.

It would seem manifest, then, we have the additionally the plants of the soil of the bedding furrow in the arm of the soil. And so of the fertilizer should be applied with, or near the seed, at the soil of the bedding furrow in the special policies.

It would seem manifest, then, we have a plant of the planting. The effect of this small plants food in the propo well, provided these lower grades be applied in heavier quantities.

So it has been found that corn, sugar cane, sorghum, grasses and other crops belonging to the grass family respond best to a fertilizer that shall contain 10 parts of phosphoric acid, 5 parts of nitrogen and 2 parts of potash—or a 10-5-2 fertilizer. The following formulas are in precisely the same proportions, only they are of lower grade, and would give practically the same results only when a correspondingly larger application shall be made per acre-viz. 9-4.50-1.80; or 3-4.00-1.00; or 7-3.50-1.40, and so on. Of course, these lower grades can be sold at lower prices than the high grades; but, as a rule, the farmer will find it more economical to buy the high grades; both on account of their cheaper price per "unit" and also the saving of freight the latter being precisely the same, per ton, for both high and low grades.
